Trigger ~~extensions and adaptations~~ Extensions & Adaptions

In accordance with the ISSF Rules, the style/shape of a trigger is a personal choice as long as it stays within the boundary of the given dimensions (as stated in ISSF Rule Rules \(currently 7.4.4.1-Item D\) 'Depth of fore-end' and Item I 'Maximum thickness (breadth) of the fore-end'). No definition of the shape of the trigger is given.

- Trigger extension: triggers that have modifications compared to standard triggers, but are inside the dimensions of ISSF Rule 7.4.4.1 Rules and protected by a trigger guard.
- Trigger ~~Adaptions~~ adaptations: triggers that have modifications compared to standard triggers, and are outside of the trigger guard and dimensions of ISSF rule 7.4.4.1 Rules.
  - athletes must have a medical reason to use a trigger adaption;
  - this must be reviewed and approved by a World Shooting Para Sport Classification Panel during a Technical Assessment technical assessment (in consultation with the Technical Delegate, regarding the safe use of the proposed trigger adaptation) and recorded on the athlete's Classification and WSPS License Cards.

To help to understand the differences, on the following pages are some example photographs and explanations.

Updated April 2016 September 2020

1 Overview

2 Upper part support (U form Shaft)

Max. weight: 200 grams

3 Support stand measuring procedure (Rule 2.9.13)

3.1 Zero point

250 gram measuring bar is used to determine the zero point.

3.2 Spring flexibility

720 gram measuring bar is used to indicate spring flexibility:

- Weak (a) spring: minimum 35mm flexibility
- Strong (b) spring: minimum 25mm flexibility

4 Test Bar for Spring Flexibility (Rule 3.9.13)

- 4.1 All springs are checked and marked at the Equipment Control the following way. Any spring shall be tested in all four positions.
- 4.2 The spring is tested with the open turn to the top. If it passes the test, the spring will be marked with an Equipment Control sticker at the top. Checks will be more efficient this way and equal for all athletes.
- 4.3 If the spring fails the test, it will be retested up to 3 times at different positions by turning it 90 degrees' clockwise from the open turn. As soon as the spring passes the test, the spring will be marked with a sticker at the failing position opposite of the passing side; additionally, the sticker and the post will be marked with a thick red line.
- 4.4 All springs have to be used during the competition with the sticker (and possibly the red line) facing the athlete, so that the equipment control sticker is clearly visible to the range staff.
