About Oran

Oran, known as “El Bahia” (The Radiant), is one of Algeria’s most iconic coastal cities and a major cultural, historical, and sporting hub of North Africa. Founded in 903 AD, Oran has been shaped by centuries of Amazigh, Arab, Ottoman, Spanish, and French influences, giving it a rich and unique identity that blends Mediterranean and African heritage.

Historically, Oran has always been a gateway between Africa and Europe. Its strategic port made it a center of trade, exchange, and ideas, while its architecture, from Ottoman forts to colonial boulevards, reflects this diverse past. Today, Oran stands as a modern, dynamic city while preserving its deep historical roots.

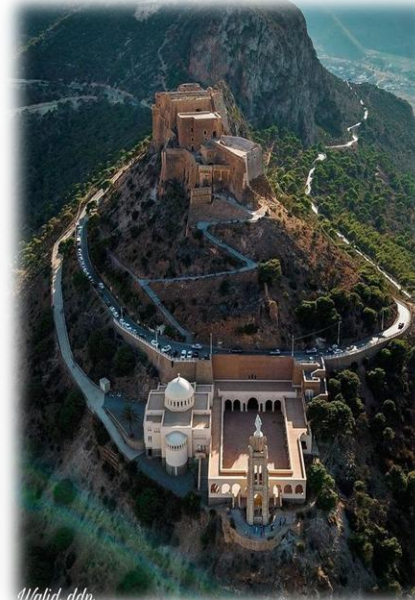

Culturally, Oran is world-renowned as the birthplace of Rai music, a genre that revolutionized North African music and reached global audiences. The city is also home to a vibrant artistic scene, with theaters, festivals, and a strong tradition of poetry, cinema, and visual arts that reflect the creativity and resilience of its people.

In sports, Oran is one of Algeria’s leading athletic capitals. It has hosted major international competitions, including the Mediterranean Games, and boasts modern sports infrastructure, high-level training centers, and a passionate sporting culture. Football, athletics, combat sports, and Paralympic disciplines all play a central role in the city’s sporting life, making Oran a natural stage for continental championships.

With its Mediterranean coastline, warm hospitality, and strong sporting tradition, Oran offers more than just a competition venue—it provides a true cultural and human experience. Hosting the African Championship in Oran means bringing athletes together in a city where history, culture, and sport meet to celebrate excellence, unity, and the spirit of Africa.
