All springs are checked and marked at the equipment control the following way. Any spring shall be tested in all four positions.

The spring is tested with the open turn to the top. If it passes the test, the spring will be marked with an equipment control sticker at the top. Checks will be more efficient this way and equal for all athletes.

If the spring fails the test, it will be retested up to 3 times at different positions by turning it 90 degrees' clock-wise from the open turn. As soon as the spring passes the test, the spring will be marked with a sticker at the failing position opposite of the passing side; additionally, the sticker and the post will be marked with a thick red line.

All springs have to be used during the competition with the sticker (and possibly the red line) facing the athlete, so that the equipment control sticker is clearly visible to the range staff.
